

So You Want to be an Artist: Art for Teens with Kay Latham

Wednesdays: 4 to 5:30 p.m.
March 3 to March 24

Additional follow-up classes will be scheduled based on student interest.

This is a 4-week introductory class is for teens (age 12 and up) who are aspiring to be artists or are serious about art. You will learn color theory, color mixing, brushwork, and other basic techniques. Drawing will be incorporated in the classes. Kay will do paint-along demonstrations and provide group and individual instruction.

Supply List

If you have paints and brushes, bring them; but

DO NOT go out and buy them, they will be furnished until purchases can be made.

Art supplies needed will be explained at the first class and will be available for purchase at the Visual Arts Center.

DO BRING a roll of paper towels and a glass jar with a screw-tight lid.

About the Instructor

Kay Latham coordinates the open studio painting workshop every Wednesday at the Visual Arts Center. She also teaches beginning and intermediate oil painting from her home studio. She has previously taught at ICC. She accepts portrait, still life and figurative commissions.

"I have worked in pastels, acrylics and water-color, but my love is oils. Having always been fascinated by faces, my passion is portraiture."
